

Attached are two documents (7.2, 6.1) with embedded hyperlinks to job search websites. There are some in there that do not apply...Just ignore them and concentrate on the ones that seem to make sense to you. You are looking for companies, not just jobs, to whom you want to send your resume. As you find the names of companies, Google them and go to their web site and look at all their jobs... Call us if you have any questions.

I don't want you to slow for the curves, this is a numbers game and you need to hit at many as possible. Do several searches using different job titles and see what you come up with in this area first. No search engine is the same so it takes some work...

A couple of my favorites are www.indeed.com and www.jobs.plaxo.com they have fairly good search engines and are good ones to practice on as soon as we have finished your resume and sent you the four formats to use ... then call us so we can see if you are getting all you can out of them.

Keep this in mind...While you are looking for specific openings, you are also looking for companies that are hiring. Since they advertise less than 20% of their openings, they could have one and be waiting for a 'walk in'.... guess what... that's you. If you can't get in the door, send your resume anyhow.

Also start working with employment services... so we can discuss the 'how to' in a few days... try MRI or SRI, that's Sales Recruiters International... let me know how it goes, and also try Snelling Personnel... if you come across recruiters and employment services as you search web sites, send them your resume. When sending to an Employment Agency (prefer you see the local ones) or Recruiter, tell them a salary range that you feel you'd like to make (see cover letters).

We do not recommend that you post your resume on any site on the web. You don't want to do anything to cause you to lose your present job unless they know you are leaving or you've left.

You can, however, send your resume to any employer who identifies themselves as well as Employment Agencies & Recruiters.

Enthusiastically, Coach Bob
