Welcome to Volume 6, Issue 1 of Emerging Leadership Journeys (ELJ). This issue contains conceptual, qualitative, and quantitative articles/studies produced by students in the School of Business & Leadership’s Ph.D. in Organizational Leadership program. All of the articles/studies in this issue come from first-year students in their first through fourth semesters of study. These articles/studies provide excellent examples of the type of work our students produce during their program of study.

A key factor in advancing the field of leadership and improving the leadership skills of professionals worldwide is the timely dissemination of relevant and innovative research. All of our publications are designed to stimulate scholarly debate, as both secular and Biblical principles are integrated to advance the field of leadership. Subscriptions to all of our online publications are provided at no charge.

Our journal articles may be reprinted in accordance with the doctrine of fair use as described in the U.S. Copyright Law. Anyone wishing to reprint School of Business & Leadership articles for commercial use or monetary gain must request permission and pay the associated fee. Please request reprint permission by completely and submitting the form located at the end of this journal, along with a check for any applicable reprint fee.

If you have any questions about any of our publications, please contact us at glepublications@regent.edu.

1000 Regent University Drive
Virginia Beach, VA 23464
757.352.4550 | global@regent.edu